How does your heart work? This class will be an interactive lecture about the heartbeat and then an optional visit to the anatomy lab to see a human heart.

Consensus U

Room 201, Landrum Bolling Center

Kelly Burk, Chaplain and Director of Quaker Life and

Meg Streepey-Smith, Associate Professor of Geology and Clerk of the Faculty

Would you like to be trained in the mechanics of consensus decision-making and governance drawn from Quaker practice and used at Earlham? This interactive class will explore the underlying values and processes of consensus-building which can be used in a variety of settings to emphasize cooperation in sharing information and airing differences allowing new ideas to emerge.

Corridos: Mexican Tragic Ballads Songwriting Workshop

Room 150, Center for Visual and Performing Arts

Juan Dies, Class of 1988, Outstanding Alumni Award Winner, Grammy Nominee and Co-founder of Sones de Mexico Ensemble

Learn to write an authentic Mexican "corrido" in this free, two-hour workshop (in Spanish) led by Juan Dies (EC'88 Music & SoAn Major) as part of a 2018 US Corrido Songwriting Tour sponsored in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. By the end of this workshop the class will have written and performed an original song in a corrido form. The corrido is a 150-year-old Mexican ballad tradition that narrates tragic tales based on true events and honors folk heroes. Learn about the history of this tradition and the rules for writing the poetic lyrics of these captivating songs.

Planned Giving Seminar: Making your Wealth Matter

Hall of Fame Room, Athletics and Wellness

Jeff Perkins and Mimi Blackwell, Friends Fiduciary

Join Jeff Perkins and Mimi Blackwell from Friends Fiduciary to learn about ways to make a meaningful gift while receiving income. Attendees will also explore how to leverage gifts through socially responsible investing. Through your philanthropy, you can encourage companies to improve their environmental, social and governance practices.

Contemporary Sports Management: The State of the Sports Industry in Today's American Landscape

Seth Powless, Terence Motsi, Robert Couch, Assistant Professors of Global Management
Room 208, Landrum Bolling Center

This seminar examines sports management from multiple lenses including marketing and finance. Topics to be addressed include contemporary challenges and opportunities in the sports industry including societal implications at every level: K-12, college, and professional sports environments. The format will include small breakout discussions followed by large-group dissemination.

Wandering Amongst the Primes

Tim McLarnan, Tremewan Professor of Mathematics

Room 224, Center for Science and Technology

We met the prime numbers in school, but primes remain an area of intense mathematical investigation. We'll wander about the edges of the dewy forest where the primes hide, asking questions like: How many primes are there? How close together are they? What happens when you add primes? Why would Jeff Bezos be no richer than you if it weren't for primes?

White Supremacy in Rick Riordan's The Lightning Thief
Maxwell Paule, Assistant Professor of Ancient and Classical Studies
Room 315 A&B, Landrum Bolling Center

Who doesn't love Percy Jackson?! Teenagers gallivanting across the country, battling mythical monsters, going on quests - What's not to like? Unfortunately, while Rick Riordan was writing that world, he also crafted a narrative that implicitly promotes white supremacy and American exceptionalism. So, come on in. We can ruin a piece of childhood nostalgia together.

Sgraffito on Red Clay Tiles
Judy Wojcik, Associate Professor of Art
Room 102, Center for the Visual and Performing Arts

Red clay tiles covered with white slip will be provided and alums are asked to carve drawings or messages on the tiles. The removal of the white slip uncovers the hidden red clay creating a strong contrast perfect for images or text. The fired tiles will then be shared amongst campus offices as coasters or wall plaques.

In Times Like These: the Uses of Poetry
Barb Caruso, Professor Emerita of English and WGSS
Room 212, Carpenter Hall

A look at if or how poetry "serves." Comparative close reading of a few short poems and stimulating discussion about the consequences of the marginalization of the Humanities in times like these.
