  Elliot Ratzman, Religion, Jewish Studies
  Room 211, Landrum Bolling Center
Have Jews been victims of racism? Are Jews a race? Despite the controversy, American Jews see themselves as an antiracist community. Jews are proud of the outsized role they played during the 60s Civil Rights Movement—but have Jews become complacent and complicit with white supremacy? Learn how race and anti-racism work within Jewish life, drawing unexpected connections between Jewish history and Critical Race Theory.

How to Preserve Your Family Treasures like an Archivist or Curator!
Jenny Freed, Director of Special Collections and College Archivist
Christian Adams, Art Curator
Basement of Lilly Library

Join Jenny Freed and Christian Adams to learn how to preserve your family treasures like a Special Collections professional. Jenny and Christian will give you a brief introduction to preservation, discussing such topics as the impact of acidity, temperature, humidity, and other environmental factors on objects. They will also bring in sample objects to show you how they would approach their care and preservation.

You are welcome to bring items for them to look at. If you can’t travel with your object, send Jenny a picture with some information to freedje@earlham.edu, and she will try to bring along a similar object from Earlham’s collection to the session. Please note, they will not tell you how to preserve your item. They will tell you instead the different approaches they could take if an object like it came into their care.

Quaker Responses to Discussions about Race in Public School Classroom:
Considering the Role of "Hamilton" (the musical) and "The 1619 Project"
Stephen W. Angell, Leatherock Professor of Quaker Studies
Trueblood classroom, ESR classroom building

"Hamilton" (the musical) and "the 1619 Project" present two popular interpretations of the American Revolutionary period, ones that are very different from one another but each in its own way well-grounded in scholarship going back centuries. We will explain what these interpretations are, how they are grounded in excellent scholarship, and then explore together how both might be applied to current controversies over instruction about race in public education and other educational settings.
